

In search of moss

Published at 12:01AM, October 2 2013

Some like their lawns pristine and green, while others recommended the use of either moss or wildflowers for a more relaxing aspect

Sir, I advise Richard Todd (letter, Oct 1) to water his lawn with glyphosate which will kill the grass and weeds. The moss will grow back faster than anything else when the rain and dark days of winter arrive.

Dr Michael Cullen Dunvegan, Isle of Skye

Sir, Richard Gill (letter, Sept 30) should go further and lay down a wildflower lawn. It looks terrific, encourages wildlife and only gets mowed twice a year.

Janet Inglis Battle, E Sussex

Sir, I'm afraid there are no short cuts to a pristine moss lawn; after 25 years of neglect, mine still produces persistent tufts of grass.

Bob Bury Leeds